

Manuscript With Line Numbers

1 The intermediate representation lowers a page of drawing operators into a structure that carries
2 paragraphs, formulas and styles. Each character retains its own bounding box, font identity and render 3 order so that the typesetter can place translated glyphs without losing the original layout. The 4 intermediate representation lowers a page of drawing operators into a structure that carries paragraphs,
5 formulas and styles. Each character retains its own bounding box, font identity and render order so that 6 the typesetter can place translated glyphs without losing the original layout. The intermediate 7 representation lowers a page of drawing operators into a structure that carries paragraphs, formulas and 8 styles. Each character retains its own bounding box, font identity and render order so that the typesetter
9 can place translated glyphs without losing the original layout. The intermediate representation lowers a 10 page of drawing operators into a structure that carries paragraphs, formulas and styles. Each character 11 retains its own bounding box, font identity and render order so that the typesetter can place translated